

Please meet Gregory Coleman, a Chicago Housing Authority HCV resident. He first learned about Trades and Apprenticeship opportunities through an email from Sheena Brewer, Trades and Apprenticeships Program Specialist at the Chicago Housing Authority WORC office. She referred him to the St. Paul Pre-Apprenticeship training program and upon completion he applied to the Carpenters Union and was accepted. Today, Gregory is working on the Obama Presidential Center project where he assembles the letter molds that will create one of President Obama's speeches to be displayed on the side of the library. He also creates the steel that goes into the letter mold reinforcement when the concrete is poured over it, it is a skill he learned that involves welding. Gregory said, "being a union carpenter is something that has taken him to a different place in life and he wants to show others that look like him how to get there and the process that he took". If you are interested in learning more about Trades and Apprenticeships, please contact the WORC office at worc@thecha.org for more information.
